

American National Standard

common name for the pest control chemical –

N-(2,6-dichlorophenyl)-5-ethoxy-7-fluoro-
[1,2,4]triazolo[1,5-c]pyrimidine-2-sulfonamide
“diclosulam”

Approved May 28, 1997

Secretariat: U.S. Department of Agriculture

Page 1 of 2 pages

1 Common name: diclosulam

1.1 The word “diclosulam” (pronounced die-clow-sue-lam) has been accepted as the American National Standard Common Name for the chemical N-(2,6-dichlorophenyl)-5-ethoxy-7-fluoro[1,2,4]triazolo[1,5-c]pyrimidine-2-sulfonamide.

1.2 Acceptance signifies compliance with American National Standard Common name for a pest control chemical – Procedure for acceptance, ANSI K62.1-1985.

2 Use of common name

2.1 The common name applies to the 100% pure chemical.

2.2 Technical grades and formulations shall indicate the percentage of diclosulam present; for example, diclosulam 95%.

¹⁾ Name furnished upon request.

2.3 The sponsor¹⁾ of the common name “diclosulam” has agreed to release and permit the use of the name “diclosulam” with respect to any product, whether or not manufactured or formulated by it, that contains a pest control chemical conforming to the description set forth in this American National Standard.

3 Limitations

Neither the American National Standards Institute nor the Accredited Standards Committee for Common Names for Pest Control Chemicals, K62, guarantees or assumes any responsibility that use of this name in connection with this or any other chemical or product will not infringe on or conflict with any existing proprietary name, trademark, or trade name. Approval as an American National Standard Common Name constitutes recognition by the Institute that a

An American National Standard implies a consensus of those substantially concerned with its scope and provisions. An American National Standard is intended as a guide to aid the manufacturer, the consumer, and the general public. The existence of an American National Standard does not in any respect preclude anyone, whether he has approved the standard or not, from manufacturing, marketing, purchasing, or using products, processes, or procedures not conforming to the standard. American National Standards are subject to periodic review and users are cautioned to obtain the latest editions.

The American National Standards Institute does not develop standards and will in no circumstances give an interpretation of any American National Standard. Moreover, no person shall have the right or authority to issue an interpretation of an American National Standard in the name of the American National Standards Institute.

CAUTION NOTICE: This American National Standard may be revised or withdrawn at any time. The procedures of the American National Standards Institute require that action be taken to reaffirm, revise, or withdraw this standard no later than five years from the date of approval. Purchasers of American National Standards may receive current information on all standards by calling or writing the American National Standards Institute.

ANSI K62.368-1997